"Tempranillo, Spain’s star native grape, is somewhat difficult to grow, and produces wines that have a wonderfully complex bouquet of cherries, leather and even a touch of earthiness. Thick skins allow for good color and extract, making it extremely age worthy and ideal for blending. Garnacha, the most widely planted red grape in the world, thrives in warm, dry regions producing wines of great concentration, with explosive raspberry fruit characters and soft tannins. Together, these varieties combine to produce a wonderfully dense, powerful wine with loads of black fruit, ripe raspberry and a smooth, long finish." - Reviewed by: Producer
