68946	2008 Dalamara Paliokalias Xinomavro	$24.99	N/A	N/A
	"The 2008 Paliokalias, a Xinomavro, was aged in used oak averaging five years of age for approximately 14 months, according to the data sheet. This is a winner. Brilliantly focused, powerful and gripping, it assaults the palate with its fruit as well as its power and acidity. Earthy, complex and captivating, this is an intense wine that will appeal to "old style" Barolo lovers. Its purity of fruit and structure are both top notch. The next day it had thinned, making me question its concentration a little, if I may quibble. It was, however, even more complex and interesting, still gripping and powerful. The earthy, fruit flavors were quite enchanting. If you wonder why I keep making that comparison to Nebbiolo, this is a good example. If you want sweet, oaky and sexy, look elsewhere." - Reviewed by: The Wine Advocate - 92pts

	"Bright ruby color with vivid garnet reflections. Chocolate-covered black cherry and kirsch flavors with notes of candied plum and vanilla. On the palate it has a rich, smooth and round feel with a peppery aftertaste." - Reviewed by: Producer
59610	2008 Skouras Grand Cuvee Nemea	$24.99	N/A	N/A
	"The 2008 Grande Cuvee is an Agiorgitiko sourced from Korinthia and aged in new French oak for approximately 12 months. There is a certain creaminess here cut by the often aggressive tartness that startled me early on. In the mid-palate, it is elegant and graceful, with a Burgundian feel. It does flesh out a bit with aeration and there is still some tannic bite, plus a modest herbaceous nuance popping up here and there." - Reviewed by: The Wine Advocate - 87pts
