73969	2012 Machmer Gewurztraminer Spatlese	$13.99	$12.99	7%
	"This Spätlese, translating to 'late-harvest,' is sweeter than the style from Alsace, but also has far more floral, fruity and off setting spicy aromatics and flavors: rose petals, lychee, passion fruit, apricot, ginger and white pepper. Its lower level of alcohol combined with its off-dry nature and perfumed profile make it a perfect pairing with spicier cuisine, like that of India, Thailand, China and Mexico, as well as an array of cheeses, especially Münster, and can even be served as a dessert wine." - Reviewed by: Producer

	"The exotic flair of this Riesling is composed from the aroma of lemons and limes, slight mint echoes, as well as a touch of lychee, tarragon, banana, pear and pineapple. 	"The caramel edge and rounded palate impression of Leitzs 2009 Rudesheimer Magdalenenkreuz Riesling Spatlese point toward the super-ripe and botrytis-inflected side of its vintage. A Bittersweet amalgam of peach and apple with vanilla, peach kernel, and apple pip, this soothes where the Dragonstone practically incites (not to mention excites). This long-finishing "fruit bomb" can probably be counted on in such a vintage for 15-20 years of service, though I know of nobody (conspicuously including both yours truly and Johannes Leitz) who has put that to the test."
