| | "The Padron family has created quite the tradition by coming out with a new Padron Family Reserve every year to commemorate the company's history. The Padron Family Reserve No. 45 Maduro was [Cigar Aficionado's] 2009 Cigar of the Year—this is the natural version of that very same cigar. It has the same dimensions and suggested retail price, but the lighter wrapper gives the cigar a different flavor. While the considerable kick of the maduro is informed by hearty, resonant coffee, cocoa and spice flavors that saturate the palate, the natural is a bit more mellow, with flavors of cocoa bean and earth on the palate. The cigar is quite balanced and exceptionally flavorful. It's impossible to exaggerate how well the Padron family has done in [Cigar Aficionado's] Top 25—three times the company has had a Cigar of the Year, and the Padrons have never failed to have a cigar in our top five. It's an impressive show of consistency that no other company can claim." Reviewed by: Cigar Aficionado 95pts This cigar was named #4 of Cigar Aficionado's Top 25 Cigars of 2010. | | "It was two years in the making, and it appears that the wait was certainly worth it. The new La Aroma de Cuba Mi Amor represents the first time that Ashton Distributors Inc. has released a cigar cloaked in a Mexican wrapper. The Mi Amor Magnifico is a stellar medium-bodied smoke, toothy, dark and box pressed, with intense flavors of rich coffee paired with a touch of vanilla. This is the newest version of La Aroma de Cuba, a brand that originated in Cuba and was reinvented by Ashton. The new version of the brand debuted in 2002 as a Honduran smoke. Ashton later enlisted Jose "Pepin" Garcia to make a new version of La Aroma, which it dubbed Edicion Especial. In 2009 Ashton moved the original La Aroma to Garcia as well, and the line was rebled. Today, Garcia makes every La Aroma de Cuba at his My Father Cigars Inc. factory in Estelí, Nicaragua. Mexican wrappers have been part of the cigar industry for decades, but Cuban-seed Mexican wrappers are relatively new. They certainly work well on this blend." The blend consists of a golden 7 year old Connecticut shade wrapper, Mexican binder with Dominican and Nicaraguan filler tobaccos. The cigar smokes like a dream from start to finish and has dominant flavors of dried nuts and wood. There are notes of cream present throughout the smoke that are accompanied by a thin velvety layer of spice. This blend was created to accommodate the smoker in search of that mild to medium bodied cigar with an array of flavors and Rocky has done it with this line.

After endless requests to produce the cigar, Drew Estate finally heard the cries of the cigar world and made it available to a select few appointed merchants. The robusto comes wrapped in a silky Connecticut broadleaf wrapper that collaborates with six other types of tobaccos from six different farms. The combination of the seven tobaccos creates a unique full-bodied smoke. | | | | |
