	"The 2012 Muscadet from Pepiere is an excellent example. The wine is lemony, stony and bracing on the palate. This is all the more remarkable as 2012 was a difficult year. There was bad weather during flowering which caused a reduction in the crop by 50%. Fortunately, dry and sunny weather in the weeks leading to harvest salvaged the vintage. This is a great bottle of Muscadet." - Reviewed by: Producer

This is exceptionally good for what it is and recommended." - Reviewed by: Burghound - 88pts

Seductive and juicy on the finish. 100% Petit Manseng, 10.5% alcohol and approximately 125g/l residual sugar." - Reviewed by: Producer

	"Dried fig and date with an overtone of black tea smokiness greet the taster from a glass of Berthet-Bondet 2005 Vin de Paille, ushering in a bittersweet, low-toned, and overtly dried fruit palate impression, with alkaline and heavily toasted nut elements chiming in on a satisfyingly long and not overly sweet finish. Happily, this evinces neither heaviness not heat; and while it isn’t by any means one of the more complex or intriguing of its genre, it will certainly remain vital for two or more decades, during which further nuance might be revealed." - Reviewed by: The Wine Advocate - 89pts

	"A barrel sample of the 2009 Hermitage Ex-Voto Blanc is sensational. Notes of powdered rock, anise, intense honeyed citrus, tropical fruit and quince along with lively acids and massive concentration suggest this 2009 will be a long distance runner and confirms the greatness of this vintage. Fat and unctuous, it should be approachable young, but last for 2+ decades." 94-98 pts, reviewed by Robert Parker. - Reviewed by: The Wine Advocate - 94 to 98pts

	"Dagueneau's approach is to produce wines that bring out the natural minerality of the soil and have balance, harmony and longevity. The relative sweetness of each vintage is secondary to the balance of acidity, texture and richness of fruit and the wines will never be chaptalised. The 2010 Jurancon Jardin De Babylone is a deep yellow-gold in color with fruity aromas of apricot, peach, citrus and tropical fruit with honeyed overtones.
