This offering, from very old vines and aged completely in concrete, is a naked, unadulterated, unmanipulated effort with great minerality (from the chalky, limestone soils) and an intensity and richness (from the old vines) that are normally found in $50+ wines. As I told Eric Solomon, at these ridiculously low prices, consumers will never suspect the wines are at this level of quality. This outstanding 2011 offers loads of kirsch, raspberry, licorice, garrigue and chalky minerality. Medium to full-bodied and dense, it is best consumed over the next 2-3 years. "Very fragrant scents of nectarine, mango and rose. Broad, slightly loose-knit pit fruit flavors are gently lifted by a note of candied lemon. Finishes smooth and warm, with lingering pit fruit flavors. This wine would be a good call to serve with spicy or salty foods and offers exceptional value." - Reviewed by: International Wine Cellar - 88pts

54556	2012 Las Rocas Grenache Rose	$10.99	N/A	N/A

"The lovely rose petal hue in our Las Rocas 2012 Rosé hints at the enticing aromas of raspberry and strawberry in this wine. Clean and fruit forward, this Rosé is crafted entirely from Garnacha grapes grown in our high altitude vineyards. The extreme conditions in Calatayud translate to bright red fruit flavors that mingle with a hint of spice to create a full-bodied, elegant Rosé with a long, fruity finish." - Reviewed by: Producer
