| 32568 | 2010 Castello di Volpaia Chianti Classico Riserva This wine was named #21 on Wine Spectator's Top 100 Wines of 2014 list. "The estate's 2005 Chianti Classico Riserva is a very appealing, mid-weight effort. Floral aromatics lead to a core of vibrant red fruits supported by firm, but well integrated, tannins. Today it remains quite primary, yet I am not convinced the wine has the requisite complexity to develop markedly in bottle." - Reviewed by: Wine Spectator - 93pts | $25.99 | $24.49* | 6% |
| 74847 | 2008 Marchesi Torrigiani Guidaccio "The 2008 Guidaccio is Sangiovese, Merlot and Cabernet Sauvignon. The bouquet is classic Sangiovese, while the French varieties add mid-palate presence and depth as this gorgeous red opens up in the glass. Firm yet well-integrated tannins support layers of menthol, leather, licorice and spices on the inviting finish. In its best vintages Guidaccio can challenge wines that cost twice as much, and also has the pedigree to develop beautifully in bottle. The wine possesses gorgeous depth and a long, silky finish redolent of generous toasted oak, new leather and smoke. This is an especially sleek style of Brunello, and while the use of French oak is slightly heavy-handed, the wine possesses tons of clarity and finesse, especially in the sweet tannins that linger on the close. The style is rich and opulent and there is enough layered oak spice and tannin to support the softer nature of the fruit. Ripe cherry, blackberry and dark plum abound. My only note of hesitation is sparked by the mouthfeel that is slightly thinner and shorter than past vintages. This Brunello is aged in a combination of botte grande and smaller oak barrel. The wine is fleshed out, approachable and almost ready to drink now." - Reviewed by: The Wine Advocate - 91pts | | | |

Black cherries, plums, French oak, spices and new leather all come alive in the glass in a wine that offers significant near-term appeal. | | "From the Colle al Matricchese location east of Montalcino's city walls, the 2009 Brunello di Montalcino shows a rich fabric that is woven tight with evident strands of black fruit, mesquite smoke, crushed black pepper, licorice, rosemary oil and root beer. The wine leans away from the sweet side of Brunello to the savory side and that is ultimately what makes it so attractive. It is put together thanks to masculine and muscular touches with evocative shadings of smoke and mineral that shift and change as the wine opens in the glass. This bouquet is a moving target that keeps your fixed attention for as long as you have the wine in front of you. And, considering the general quality here compared to many of its peers, that won't be very long at all. The mouthfeel feels a bit shorter than past vintages and that's why this wine didn't score higher." - Reviewed by: The Wine Advocate - 92pts | | | |

Layers of fruit continue to develop, leading to a rich, creamy finish that is striking in its beauty. A relatively big, fruit-driven wine, the 2008 is all about balance. In this style, it is easily one of the very finest wines made in Montalcino. I have to say, it is also one of the most joyous, exuberant wines I tasted during my week in Montalcino.
